1. The Yugoslav Ministry of War issued a general order dated 11 December 1948 to the entire command, stating that all illiterate officers and NCOs must learn to read and write before the end of 1949, or they would be retired to the reserve. The circular recommended that all facilities be granted those interested in learning.
2. Immediately after the war the Yugoslav Army arranged for three or four months courses in a higher school for those of the military who wished to learn to read and write. Many men who received the certificate upon completion of this course learned nothing at all but were granted the certificates because of Partisan activity.
3. A leading Croat Deputy in the National Parliament at Belgrade recently presented a motion to the President of the "Camera" in which he denounced the state of immorality existing in the Yugoslav Army. He delivered a vigorous attack against the Womens Army Corps, in which he stated that their behavior was similar to that of prostitutes and elaborated on orgies that had taken place in the women's barracks. He also denounced the prevalence of venereal disease and the lack of medicines to cope with them. The motion was excluded from public reports and turned over to the Ministry of War.
